

A circular phylogenetic tree showing the relationships between various bacterial strains based on their 16S rDNA sequences. The tree is divided into several major clades, with labels indicating the number of copies (0 or 1) for each strain. The tree is rooted at the top, and the branches radiate outwards, forming a complex, multi-layered structure. The labels are small and dense, following the curvature of the branches.